“CRAZY RICH AND OTHER ASIAN AMERICAN FANDOMS”
After decades of activism focused on breaking into mainstream media industries, Asian Americans have finally begun to see the fruits of their labor with numerous movies and TV shows featuring Asian Americans both in front of and behind the camera. How does the success of media including Crazy Rich Asians, To All the Boys I’ve Loved Before, and Fresh Off the Boat provide a new opportunity to better understand Asian American fandoms and audiences? Building from the insights of critical race theory and fan studies, this research investigates these moments of increased visibility and what they can teach us about the racialized dimensions of fannish affect and the future of Asian American fan-activism.

“FINDING JOY AND POWER THROUGH PARODY IN THE AGE OF ONLINE STAN CULTURE”
Much of present pop music fan culture, particularly online, is built around “stan” culture – fan worship and the confrontational defense of an artist as someone who can do no wrong, or as an extension of a fan’s own values. In such a polarized and narrow view of music and celebrity culture, where does humor - and critique - fit in? Many music subcultures and fandoms have shorthand methods of discussing topics and inside jokes that only make sense within the group. Within many music fan communities, snark fandom, parody and memes can exist as a means to share fandom content with others, while reminding each other that the object of interest is imperfect and flawed, yet still worthy of interest and respect. I’ll explore how fans use parody and satire as a space for critique of the music industry, artists, and fandom itself. I’ll also talk about how the intersections of gender and race often play a role in how humor is constructed within fandoms and often exploited/appropriated by media companies.

TWITTER TIPS:
1. Use the conference hashtag (#FSNNA19) in each tweet so that all tweets about the conference are easy to follow.
2. When tweeting about panels, HASHTAG the panel number with FSN at the start (#FSNA, #FSNB, etc.) so that anybody interested in following the conversations for that specific panel can easily locate the relevant tweets (and prevents unnecessary confusion with other hashtags…)
3. Include TWITTER handles of presenters if they’re provided.
4. Don’t SNITCH TWEET. In other words, don’t tag someone being discussed in a presentation into the conversation unless the presenter expresses an interest in doing so (for example, if someone was critiquing JASON ROTHENBERG’S handling of LEXA’S death in a presentation, it would be ill-advised to tag ROTHENBERG into the conversation). Snitch tweeting can cause uninvited conflict even when done with the best intentions, so it’s best to avoid it.
5. If you’re presenting and you have materials you’re willing to share, it’s worthwhile to tweet them out. Many people may not be able to attend the conference but will be following along at home.
6. If you are presenting and you don’t want your talk to be tweeted, please let your panel know! And please be respectful of people’s wishes not to be tweeted.

HARASSMENT POLICY
FSN-NA is dedicated to providing a harassment-free conference experience for everyone, regardless of gender, gender identity and expression, sexual orientation, disability, physical appearance, body size, race, or religion. For more details, please see our web site at https://fsn-northamerica.org/
